Want to learn more about Idaho's legal system? Be part of free Citizens' Law Academy

<http://www.idahostatesman.com/2012/07/30/2209502/want-to-learn-more-about-idahos.html>

The Idaho Law Foundation wants to help members of the public learn more about the American legal system, which can be confusing and intimidating.

The foundation collaborated with attorneys and judges from the Fourth Judicial District, Fourth District Bar Association, and the US District Court, District of Idaho to organize a free, 12-week Citizens' Law Academy.

Organizers say that those who participate in the program will gain a better understanding of how the system works, the laws affecting their daily lives, their rights under the law, and the ethical standards by which judges and attorneys must conduct themselves.

Classes will meet Tuesday evenings from Sept. 4 through Nov. 13 in Boise. Organizers hope for a variety of student perspectives, and encourage anyone 18 and older from the Treasure Valley area who wants to learn more about Idaho law and the American legal system to sign up.

Space is limited Registration forms will be accepted through Aug. 17. For more information and a registration form, visit <http://isb.idaho.gov/ilf/lre/cla.html>.

Interesting that they left off the INC. from the Idaho Law Foundation.

What are they doing on a .gov domain?

It's "the charitable arm of the Idaho State Bar." How can that be? The State Bar is allegedly a "self-governing State agency." The line between government and corporations has been more than blurred. It's been obliterated!

To my knowledge, a corporation must use the "INC." whenever it states its name, such as on its website. I didn't see it did you?

Look who's on the board of directors!
